So you have booked your first professional house cleaning in Roanoke. Now what? Many first-time customers are not sure whether they should tidy up beforehand, stay home or leave instructions. A little preparation helps the crew focus on cleaning instead residential cleaning Roanoke of moving clutter, and it helps you get the most from every visit. Here is a practical guide based on how The Happy Housekeepers, a Roanoke Valley company since 1979, approaches a first clean.

Start with the estimate. The company offers free, no-obligation estimates, and that conversation is the perfect time to explain your priorities. If the upstairs bathroom is the problem area or you want extra attention on hardwood floors, say so. You can also ask about specialized services like oven and refrigerator interiors, washing walls and woodwork, cleaning light fixtures or cleaning basements.

Next, pick up the clutter. Crews clean surfaces, so clearing toys, mail, laundry and dishes lets them reach counters, floors and furniture. You do not need to clean before the cleaners come, but a quick pick-up means more of the visit goes toward dusting, vacuuming, mopping and the complete kitchen and bathroom clean-ups that make a house feel fresh.

Think about access and pets. Because employees are bonded and insured by The Happy Housekeepers, you do not have to be home during the visit. Work out entry details with the office in advance and let them know about pets, alarm systems or rooms that should be left alone. Associates are available by phone or email to set this up.

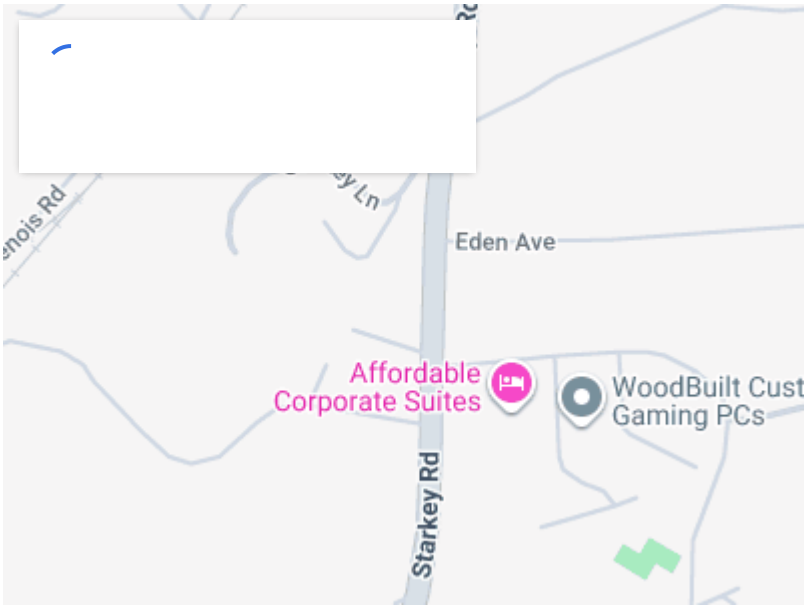

Secure anything fragile or valuable. Even the most careful crew appreciates knowing which items are irreplaceable. Putting away jewelry, important paperwork and delicate heirlooms is simply good practice with any visitor in the home.

After the visit, expect a call. The office follows up by phone after the first cleaning to make sure you are satisfied, and that is the time to mention anything you want done differently next time. Clear feedback early on helps the crew learn your preferences quickly.

Finally, decide on frequency. Some customers stay with one-time visits, while many move to weekly, bi-weekly or monthly plans once they see the difference. The company is licensed, bonded and insured and holds a BBB blue seal.
